

First Mid-West
Business Mission to Indonesia

Celebrating the 1st Anniversary of the
St. Louis–Bogor Sister-City Relationship and a New Era of Leadership

The partnership between our two peoples is strong and is growing stronger.

In all that lies ahead, in the defense of freedom, in the advance of democracy, Indonesia will have a firm ally in the American Government ... and the respect of the American people.

PRESIDENT GEORGE W. BUSH

I heartily welcome the Mid-West Trade Mission to Indonesia.

Both sides will benefit from strengthened business and trade ties.

We are confident that increased U.S. investment is vital to help Indonesia grow. Social, education and research exchanges also serve to boost our overall partnership with Indonesia. We wish the Mid-West Trade Mission every success.

U.S. AMBASSADOR TO INDONESIA
B. LYNN PASCOE

The bilateral relations between Indonesia and the United States have flourished in recent years and the two countries have embarked a new era of mutual respect and understanding. It is in both countries' interests to materialize the full potential for cooperation, particularly in trade and investment in which private sectors have an essential role to play. The Mid-West Business Mission is yet another step forward towards the exchange of economic ideas and the fostering of mutual prosperity between our two nations. I present my strongest encouragement to such an initiative and I believe that it will achieve a great success.

AMBASSADOR SUDJADNAN
PARNOHADININGRAT

WHAT IS BATAM?

Batam is an island just twelve miles from Singapore which Indonesia has prioritized as it's #1 Special Economic Zone (SEZ). It has one-stop processing of international business applications structured for rapid approval. It has 850 foreign companies and 10,000 Indonesian companies operating in the 17 industrial parks established to date. In June of 2006, Singapore signed a framework agreement for cooperative development of Batam. The 6,000 MNCs who have regional offices in Singapore can conduct their R & D and distribution in Singapore but use Batam SEZ for low cost of land and labor for production. US companies can access Indonesian raw materials and low costs and apply the strengths of the new Free Trade Agreement between the US and Singapore.

AIR-BRIDGE OPPORTUNITY

Indonesia's industrial zones are being linked to the center of the United States. Batam bonded zone has the longest runway in Indonesia. It is being connected by direct air cargo connection with the MidAmerica Saint Louis Airport located in Mascoutah, Illinois adjacent to the Saint Louis, Missouri metropolitan area.

The MidAmerica Airport can provide same-day or overnight delivery by motor freight to the entire Mid-West, with second morning delivery to the East Coast. MidAmerica is located on good-weather main highway arteries to the gulf coast and the west coast. The MidAmerica Airport has many desirable features such as a 10,000 foot runway, abundant apron parking space, a cargo building and a joint-use facility with Scott Air Force Base, which has another runway of 8,000 feet.

WHY THE MID-WEST?

The mid-west, particularly St. Louis and Chicago areas, have a strong and growing relationship with Indonesia. Indonesian President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono (SBY) received his masters degree from Webster University which is headquartered in St. Louis, and was conferred an honorary PhD at Webster University in September of 2005. His earned PhD is in Agricultural Economics. SBY completed military training at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

In 2005, St. Louis and the City of Bogor signed a Sister-Cities agreement. The Indonesian Minister of Agriculture has been a keynote speaker at the World Agricultural Forum, based in St. Louis. Mid-West soybeans are imported by Indonesia by the ship load for the local food industry. Batam's collaborator, Singapore, has just ordered 20 new Boeing 787s. Agritrade between the US and Indonesia (50% of US agriculture production occurs within a radius of 500 miles from St. Louis) continues to expand and grow.
